Doug Muder is currently in his third career. His first career was as a mathematician. He received a Ph.D. in mathematics from the University of Chicago in 1984 and worked on the Mathematical Research Project at MITRE from 1984 to 1994. His articles on geometry and information theory were published in such journals as The Proceedings of the London Mathematical Society and The Duke Mathematical Journal.

In his second career, he collaborated with several other authors to produce books for users of computer software, including VRML for Dummies and Internet: The Complete Reference.

His third and current career is as a writer and speaker on politics and religion. He is a contributing editor for UU World magazine. His blog The Weekly Sift has over 5,000 subscribers, and its occasional viral posts have garnered page-views in the hundreds of thousands. His work has also appeared in publications like Public Eye and The Humanist.

His interest in journalism goes back to high school, where he was editor of his student newspaper at Quincy Senior High in Quincy, Illinois, and worked in the newsroom at The Quincy Herald Whig. More recently, he has been on the Board of Advisors for the Banyan Project, which is creating a model and software support for local news coops, with a pilot project in Haverhill, Massachusetts.

He is a relative newcomer to Bedford. He has been a member of First Parish in Bedford for more than 20 years, but only moved to Bedford in September 2019.
